A carefully curated collection.

THERE IS SOMETHING ENDURING ABOUT STONE.

Its depth, movement and natural character give a table presence. Yet a dining table is not an object to admire from a distance. It is where everyday life happens.

Ceramic brings these two worlds together: the expressive beauty of stone and the confidence of a surface made to withstand daily use.

With Ceramic Select, we have added twelve carefully chosen ceramic surfaces from Florim, Inalco and Dekton by Cosentino to our wider palette of finishes. Inspired by travertine, marble, natural stone and mineral textures, each one was selected for the way it looks and feels, for the depth of its pattern, the quality of its finish and the way it is made to perform over time.

From quiet travertines to expressive marbles and earthy mineral textures, every surface has a character of its own.

THE DIFFERENCE IS IN THE DETAIL.

A material in its own right.

At 12 mm, the ceramic has genuine visual substance. It feels like an integral part of the table rather than a surface applied to it.

Made to be touched.

Textured, matte and silk finishes give the collection depth and a more natural, tactile character.

High-quality prints.

Refined patterns and high-quality decoration retain their detail even at close range.

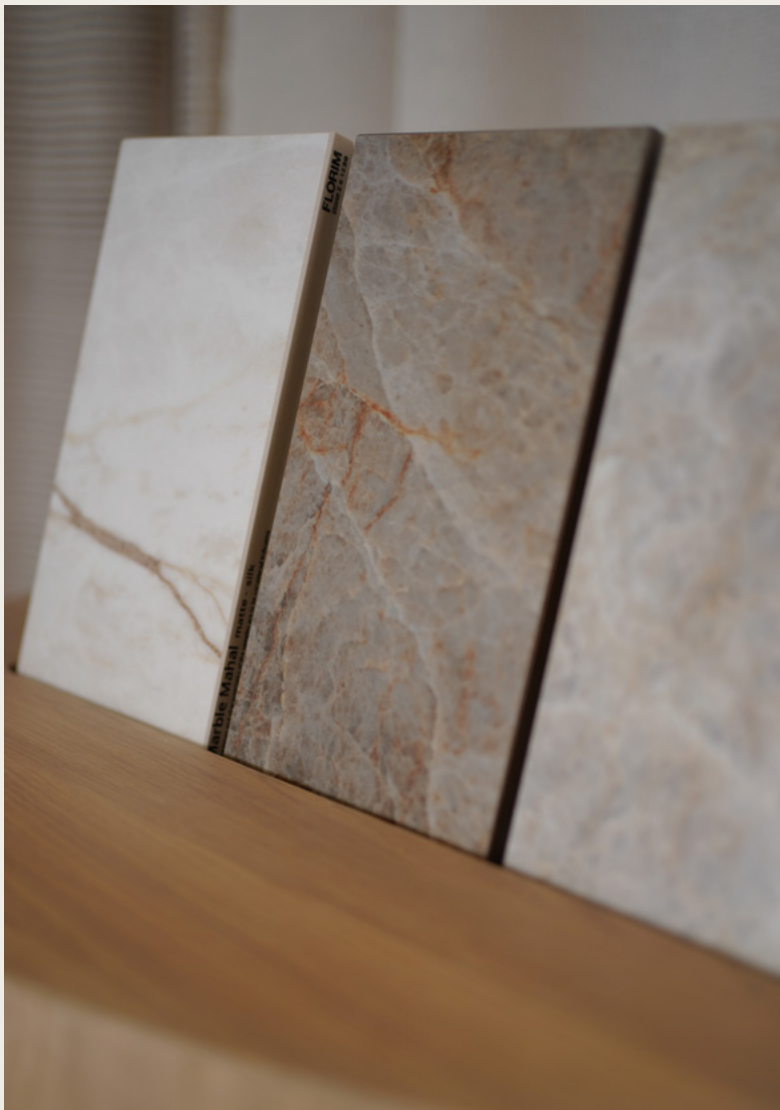

A softer expression.

Gently rounded edges give the tabletop a more considered finish while making exposed edges less vulnerable to impact.

Designed around the ceramic.

The surface extends beyond the discreet wooden support beneath it, allowing the material to become a defining element of the table.

The character of mineral surfaces.

Ceramic is a mineral-based material made from natural raw materials such as clay and feldspar, combined with mineral pigments. The ingredients are compacted under high pressure and fired at very high temperatures, creating a dense, hard and non-porous surface.

Its appeal for a dining table lies in the combination of visual expression and everyday practicality. Ceramic can reinterpret the depth, movement and colour of natural materials while offering a surface that is highly resistant to heat, stains and scratches and easy to care for.

CORE PROPERTIES.

Highly scratch resistant.

The hard surface is well suited to daily use.

Heat resistant.

Ceramic tolerates high temperatures particularly well.

Stain resistant.

Its non-porous surface prevents liquids from penetrating the material.

Easy to care for.

The sealed surface is straightforward to clean

Durable.

Its resistance to everyday wear makes ceramic well suited to furniture designed for long-term use.

Responsibility in production.

Ceramic production requires high temperatures, making resource efficiency and energy use particularly relevant.

The manufacturers selected for Ceramic Select have invested extensively in water recovery, production-waste reuse and renewable energy. Each brings its own approach: from Florim's B Corp certification to Inalco's resource-efficient production technologies and Dekton's carbon-neutral product strategy.

Twelve surfaces. Distinctly different.
